

Kari Gaare is a health policy analyst who has focused on data privacy laws and regulations for more than fifteen years at CMS. In her current role, she leads numerous initiatives for the Office of Enterprise Data and Analytics that focus on developing and implementing data disclosure programs and policies. In addition, she has been the author of a number of regulations that support data sharing programs.